

MID-CENTURY MAGIC

THE WALT DISNEY FAMILY MUSEUM

F A M I L Y M U S E U M

Exhibition Overview

Mary Blair was a color stylist, concept artist, and designer whose vibrant and whimsical style left a lasting mark on mid-century American art and animation. Known for her bold, imaginative use of color, Mary helped define the tone of Disney animated classics throughout the 40s and 50s. Her remarkable talent for creating striking color combinations caught the attention and admiration of Walt Disney and earned her the title of Disney Legend. Mid-Century Magic explores Blair's personal life and artwork, focusing on her collaborations with Walt Disney and The Walt Disney Studios.

This exhibition showcases the wide range of Mary Blair's artwork, including pieces in watercolor, pencil and ink, collage, and ceramic. While many visitors may recognize her style in beloved films such as Cinderella (1950) and Alice in Wonderland (1951), the exhibition goes deeper—highlighting how her artistic vision inspired Disney animators and Disneyland Imagineers to create enduring works that continue to captivate audiences across generations.

"it's a small world" decoupage postcard

Exhibition Themes

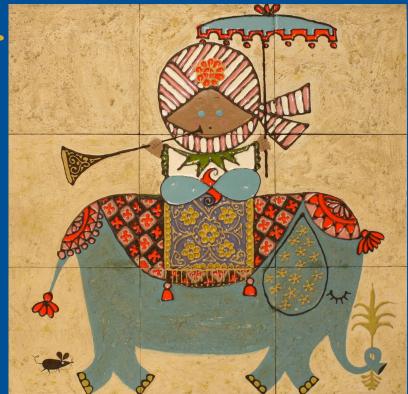

- Early artistic development and education
- Personal life and marriage to fellow Disney artist Lee Blair
- Involvement with the studio trip to South America
- Work as a color stylist, concept artist, and Disneyland attraction designer
- Professional relationship with Walt Disney
- Independent career as an advertisement illustrator

"When she did 'small world', [Blair] got into a mode that was above and beyond anything she had ever done before...She [always] had a flair for stylization, but it never reached the pinnacle that it did for 'small world'. Not only that, but it was a collage. If you look at some of the original artwork, there's wallpaper glued on it, there's burlap and dollies. She got childlike when she did this." — Rolly Crump

"it's a small world" mural for the Jules Stein Eye Institute c. 1966

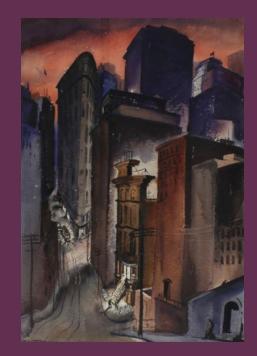

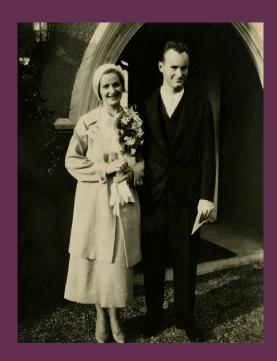

*

Early Life & Training

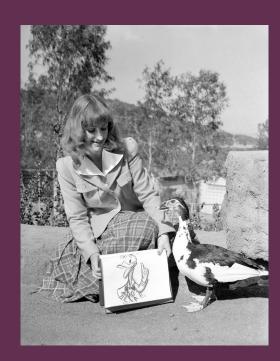

San Francisco Nights, c. 1930s

Mary and Lee Blair on their wedding day, March 3, 1934

Mary & Disney Animation

Mary Blair shows a drawing of Donald Duck to a duck, 1940

Proposed "Baby Ballet" sequence for a new 1941 version of Fantasia

Trans Solvinon, Glass 141

Loading Llamas in Peru, 1941

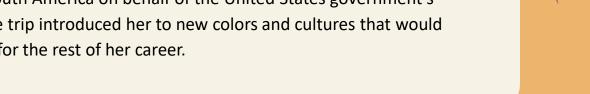

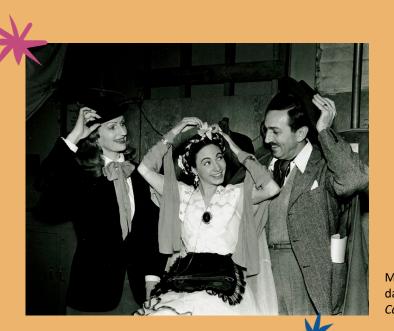

Mary Blair at the Hotel Glória in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 1941

The South America Trip

In 1941, Walt Disney and a selection of studio artists—including Mary—took a diplomatic trip to South America on behalf of the United States government's goodwill efforts. The trip introduced her to new colors and cultures that would inspire her artwork for the rest of her career.

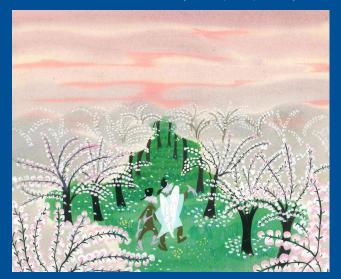

Melody Time (1948) concept art

Independent Career

Blue Bell Kids Play Clothes advertisement, c. 1953

Bonwit Teller window display by Mary, c. 1962

Reunion with Walt

Mary reviewing print for Disney's Contemporary Resort mosaic mural tile, c. 1971

L–R: Marc Davis, Walt Disney, and Mary Blair on a Disney Studios soundstage testing World's Fair attractions, c. 1964

Interactives

MARY'S SHAPES

Mary Blair Digital Experience: An augmented reality interactive which allows guests the opportunity to place themselves within a selection of artworks created by Mary Blair.

Mary's Shapes: Play with shapes just like Mary Blair! Use the touch screen to move around pieces of Mary's artwork like a puzzle, creating your very own beautiful and fun design using Mary's colors and shapes.

Paint Like Mary: Guests can paint like Mary by filling in one of her beloved pieces of art with their own choice of vibrant colors. Experiment with color palettes and create a digital masterpiece!

*

+

Complementing the exhibition is a featurette, produced and edited in-house at WDFM, that showcases works from the exhibition, paired with corresponding, iconic Disney scenes. Narrated by animation historian Mindy Johnson, this featurette includes interviews with Disney artists and experts, along with home video footage of Mary never previously shared with the public. (Runtime: 46 minutes)

Asset Breakdown & Technical Details

- Approximately 215 linear feet (wall space)
- Objects: 78 original artworks (most of which are framed or in wall cases), 1 3D object with components (Mary's art cabinet)
- Graphics (photos, reproductions, etc): 19 digital files, 18 physical prints, 10 text panels (physical or digital)
- A 46-minute featurette film (digital file)
- 3 interactive activities (digital files, one touchscreen monitor)
- Approximately 8 crates of material

MARINA VILLAR DELGADO

Director of Exhibitions and Collections

mvillar@wdfmuseum.org

THE WALT
DISNEY
FAMILY
MUSEUM

